SIX & THRIVING

Mother of Six — Still Here at 3 a.m.

BEFORE WE GET TO THE NUMBERS

If you're reading this at 2 a.m. — this is for you.

I see you. Probably in a rocking chair. Maybe on the nursery floor. Holding a baby who should — by every logical measure — be exhausted. And yet here you both are.

I've been there. Six times.

I want you to know something before you read another word:

"Your baby is not broken.

You are not failing.

This is temporary, solvable, and you will come through it."

I'm a mom of six — including a set of twins. I've spent the last decade in the trenches of infant and toddler sleep. I'm not a sleep clinic. I don't have a PhD. I lived it. Every scenario in the full guide.

And every single one of my babies learned to sleep. Every single one.

With love and solidarity,

18–24 months	5 – 6 hrs	1	7–7:30 pm

THE #1 TIMING MISTAKE PARENTS MAKE

Putting baby down at a fixed clock time ('we always do 7pm') regardless of when their last nap ended. Always count FORWARD from wake time, not BACKWARD from a target.

DIAGNOSE FIRST, FIX SECOND

5 Reasons Babies Fight Sleep

Most struggles come from a surprisingly short list.

Over-
tiredness

Under-
tiredness

Environment

Developmental Leaps

The #1 Hidden Driver: Sleep Associations

Whatever your baby falls asleep WITH, they will need at every wake-up. Always feed to sleep? They'll need to feed at 1am, 3am, 5am. Always rocked? They'll need rocking at every cycle. This is the #1 reason babies who 'used to sleep great' suddenly start waking — usually around 4 months. It is biology, not manipulation.

Tiredness Cues — The Traffic Light

Catch your baby at GREEN. By RED, cortisol has kicked in.

GREEN LIGHT

- Slowing down
- Quiet gaze
- Single yawn

ACT NOW

YELLOW LIGHT

- Frequent yawning
- Eye rubbing
- Ear pulling

BEGIN ROUTINE

RED LIGHT

- Crying
- Arching back
- Wired & hyper

DAMAGE CONTROL

STAGE 1 IS YOUR WINDOW

Most parents only catch RED — by then you're in damage control. The full book teaches you to catch GREEN every time. Turn the page for tonight's plan.

DO THESE TONIGHT

Tonight's 6-Step Plan

If you read nothing else, do these six things tonight.

Check the room

Pitch black? White noise running? 68–72°F / 20–22°C?

Find the awake window

Use the table on page 3. Set a timer.

Write the bedtime routine — IN ORDER

Bath → lotion → pyjamas → feed → song → crib awake.

Decide your response plan BEFORE the night starts

Your 2 a.m. brain won't make good decisions. Write it down.

Pause before you go in

Wait 2–3 minutes when you hear a sound. Many babies resettle.

Crib AWAKE

Drowsy is fine. Asleep is not. This single skill changes everything.

DONE IS BETTER THAN PERFECT

Pick ONE thing from this list and do it tonight. Progress starts with a single consistent step — not all six executed flawlessly.

ONE LAST THING — THE MOST IMPORTANT THING

Nobody talks about Night 3.

Night 3 is the hardest night of sleep training. Not because the method is failing — because it is WORKING. When a previously reinforced behavior stops being rewarded, it escalates dramatically before it disappears.

It's called the extinction burst. Every other guide either skips it or buries it. The full book names it, maps it night-by-night, and walks you through it.

It's the most important thing nobody told you.
