A NOTE BEFORE YOU BEGIN

You picked up this journal at the right moment. Whether it's 3pm or 3am — whether you're holding a sleeping baby or a screaming one — you are exactly where you need to be.

This journal holds two things at once: your baby's sleep data, and your own emotional truth. Because both of those matter.

You're not failing. You're figuring it out.

How to Use This Journal

START HERE

Simple. Honest. Daily. Even on the worst nights.

Track both baby and yourself, every day

Each day has two pages: your baby's sleep log, and your own emotional check-in. Both pages matter equally. Neither is optional.

Be honest — this journal is just for you

No one is grading this. Write the real feelings. Name the hard moments. The only wrong way to use this journal is to perform positivity you don't feel.

Fill in the baby log first, then your heart page

Start with the facts (times, wakings, nap data) — then move to how you actually feel. The baby log grounds you. The heart page releases you.

Use the 3am prompt when you can't sleep

Every heart page has a rotating prompt designed for the quiet hours. You don't have to write much. Even one sentence is enough.

Do the weekly reflections — they change everything

Patterns only emerge when you look back. The weekly pages turn daily data into insight. 10 minutes on a Sunday can shift the whole next week.

Grace over perfection, every single time

Missed a day? Start from today. Forgot to track a nap? Leave it blank. An imperfect journal used daily is more valuable than a perfect journal used once.

Baby's Sleep Personality (Circle One)

You can update this any time — babies change.

- ☐ The Snacker Frequent small feeds, not fully settling between.
- ☐ The Overthinker Alert, startles easily, environment-sensitive.
- ☐ The Sensitive Soul Overwhelmed by noise, light, transitions.
- ☐ The Night Owl Not tired at normal bedtime, genuinely wired late.
- ☐ The Catnapper Wakes after 45 min and cannot link cycles.
- ☐ The Party Animal FOMO-driven — stimulation equals awake.

My Promise to Myself

THE COMMITMENT

Not a promise to be perfect. A promise to be honest.

I open this journal because I believe that seeing the truth is the first step toward living it differently.

- ☐ I will track my sleep — and my feelings — without judgment.
- ☐ I will name my hard moments instead of burying them.
- ☐ I will celebrate small wins, even when the night felt like a loss.
- ☐ I will ask for help before I reach breaking point.
- ☐ I will remember that my emotional health is my baby's emotional health.
- ☐ I will not compare myself to mothers online or in my mother's group.
- ☐ I will rest when I can, eat when I can, and drink the water.
- ☐ I will hold the guilt loosely — I am learning, not failing.
- ☐ I will be honest in these pages. This journal sees the whole truth.
- ☐ I will remember: I am not just surviving the night. I am becoming her mother.

"You're not failing. You're figuring it out."

Signed:

Date:

- ☐ I have read this promise. I commit to showing up for myself — even imperfectly.

Week 1 Reflection · Week 1

WEEKLY REFLECTION · WEEK 1.
Establishing, surviving, beginning to see.

"The First Seven Days"

Q1 How many nights felt hard?

Be honest. Hard nights are data, not failure.

Q2 What pattern did you notice in the sleep log?

Repeated wake times, settle methods that worked, etc.

Q3 What was the biggest win this week?

Even if tiny — write it. It happened.

Q4 What was the hardest moment?

Name it. You survived it. It counts.

Q5 How did YOU feel this week — honestly?

Not as a mother. As a person.

Q6 What would you do differently next week?

One thing only.

Q7 What did your baby teach you about themselves this week?

Every week reveals something.

Week 2 Reflection · Week 2

WEEKLY REFLECTION · WEEK 2
What the data is already starting to tell you.

"Patterns Start to Emerge"

Q1 How many nights felt hard?

Be honest. Hard nights are data, not failure.

Q2 What pattern did you notice in the sleep log?

Repeated wake times, settle methods that worked, etc.

Q3 What was the biggest win this week?

Even if tiny — write it. It happened.

Q4 What was the hardest moment?

Name it. You survived it. It counts.

Q5 How did YOU feel this week — honestly?

Not as a mother. As a person.

Q6 What would you do differently next week?

One thing only.

Q7 What did your baby teach you about themselves this week?

Every week reveals something.

Week 3 Reflection · Week 3

WEEKLY REFLECTION · WEEK 3

Confidence is built in the details. You're building it.

"Finding Your Footing"

Q1 How many nights felt hard?

Be honest. Hard nights are data, not failure.

Q2 What pattern did you notice in the sleep log?

Repeated wake times, settle methods that worked, etc.

Q3 What was the biggest win this week?

Even if tiny — write it. It happened.

Q4 What was the hardest moment?

Name it. You survived it. It counts.

Q5 How did YOU feel this week — honestly?

Not as a mother. As a person.

Q6 What would you do differently next week?

One thing only.

Q7 What did your baby teach you about themselves this week?

Every week reveals something.

Awake Windows — Quick Reference

REFERENCE

Use this whenever wake timing feels off.

Baby's Age	Awake Window	Max Naps	Bedtime Target	Notes
0–6 weeks	45–60 min	4–5/day	Variable	Feed-wake-sleep. No set routine yet.
6–12 weeks	60–90 min	4/day	8–9 pm	Circadian rhythm begins forming.
3–4 months	90 min	3–4/day	7:30–8:30 pm	4-month regression risk period.
4–6 months	2 hrs	3/day	7–8 pm	Good time to start a method.
6–8 months	2.5 hrs	2–3/day	7–8 pm	2-nap transition zone.
8–12 months	3–3.5 hrs	2/day	6:30–7:30 pm	2 naps firm.
12–18 mths	4–5 hrs	1–2/day	7–7:30 pm	1-nap transition begins.
18–24 mths	5–6 hrs	1/day	7–7:30 pm	Nap drop approaching.

Always set a timer — don't rely on cues alone.

Awake windows are the single most powerful lever in early sleep.

Sleep Methods — Comparison

REFERENCE

Choose one. Write it down. Give it 7 consistent nights.

Extinction (CIO)

Cry level: High · Speed: Fast (3–5 days)

Best for: Persistent babies; exhausted families

My notes:

Ferber / Graduated Ext.

Cry level: Moderate · Speed: Medium (5–7 days)

Best for: Most temperaments; parents who need to act

My notes:

Chair Method

Cry level: Low–Mod · Speed: Slower (2–3 wks)

Best for: Sensitive babies; anxious parents

My notes:

Fading

Cry level: Low · Speed: Slowest (3–4+ wks)

Best for: Gentle; adaptable babies

My notes:

Pick Up / Put Down

Cry level: Low · Speed: Variable

Best for: Young babies 3–5 months; high support needs

The Six Sleep Personalities

REFERENCE

Work with your baby's temperament — not against it.

The Snacker

Frequent small feeds, not fully settling between.

Approach: Gradually lengthen gaps. Ensure full feeds in the day.

The Overthinker

Alert, startles easily, environment-sensitive.

Approach: Deep swaddle, consistent routine, minimal stimulation.

The Sensitive Soul

Overwhelmed by noise, light, transitions.

Approach: Long calm-down buffer, dimmer, quieter, slower everything.

The Night Owl

Not tired at normal bedtime, genuinely wired late.

Approach: Shift bedtime earlier by 10 min every 2–3 days.

The Catnapper

Wakes after 45 min and cannot link cycles.

Approach: Practice settling at cycle transitions. Don't rescue too fast.

The Party Animal

FOMO-driven — stimulation equals awake.

Approach: Boring, dark, silent exits. Sleep = least interesting option.

Safe Sleep Checklist

SAFE SLEEP

Run through this every night until it's muscle memory.

Safe sleep is always the first priority — before any method.

- ☐ Firm, flat mattress — no wedge, incline, or pillow-top
- ☐ Fitted sheet only — no blankets, bumpers, or pillows
- ☐ Baby on back — every sleep, every time
- ☐ Sleep sack instead of a loose blanket
- ☐ Room temperature confirmed 68–72°F / 20–22°C
- ☐ True blackout achieved (can't see your hand)
- ☐ White noise running (not inside the crib)
- ☐ All monitor and device LEDs covered
- ☐ No nightlight, or red-spectrum only
- ☐ Sleep space is crib/bassinet/play yard only

Call your pediatrician if: baby has a fever, breathing seems irregular, weight gain is a concern, or you have any doubt about physical comfort.
