

FREE

TWINS

FROM CHAPTER 14 OF SLEEP, BABY. PLEASE.

Twin Sleep, Synchronised.

From a mom who has twins,
and got them on the same schedule by Day 4.

- ◆ The Golden Rules of twin sleep (4 of them, that's it)
- ◆ How to sync feeds and naps from Day 1
- ◆ Today's printable schedule planner

SIX & THRIVING

Mother of Six — Twins Tucked in the Middle

FROM ONE TWIN MOM TO ANOTHER

I've been there. With two of them.

Most sleep books pretend twins don't exist. The ones that do mention them say something useless like 'just follow the same plan.' That's because most sleep authors don't have twins.

I do.

My twins were baby #3 and #4. Born 2 minutes apart. Identical temperaments? No. Same sleep needs? Also no. One was a Snacker, the other was a Night Owl. They woke each other up. They synchronised in ways I didn't expect — and didn't synchronise where I expected they would.

"Twin sleep isn't harder.
It's just different.

And once you know the rules, two babies sleep about as easily as one."

I tried to sleep-train my twins on different schedules — feeding one while the other slept, then swapping. It was chaos. By Day 3 I was crying. By Day 5 I was changing the plan.

What worked: synchronising EVERYTHING. When one wakes, wake the other. Feed at the same time. Nap at the same time. The Golden Rules on page 3.

By Day 4, they were on the same schedule. They've been on the same schedule ever since.

With love and solidarity,

— Six & Thriving (Mom of twins)

FOUR RULES. THAT'S IT.

The Golden Rules of Twin Sleep

If you only remember four things — make them these.

01When one wakes, wake the other.

Sounds harsh. Saves your sanity. They will fight you on Day 1. By Day 3 they're synchronised — and YOU are sleeping. Trust this rule above all others.

02Train BOTH simultaneously.

Same method. Same night. Same response time. Yes, even if one is 'easier.' Doing one twin and not the other almost always means failing both.

03Same room is fine.

They habituate to each other's sounds within 3–5 nights — faster than you'd believe. Don't separate them unless one has a medical reason. The white noise machine does the rest.

04Accept they'll progress at different rates.

One will sleep through by Night 5. The other might take Night 8. That's normal. Don't move the slow one to a different method. Hold the line. They'll catch up.

ONE TWIN GETS SICK?

Pause for THAT twin only. Continue with the other. Resume the sick twin (3–5 night reset) when they recover.

PRINTABLE PLANNER

Today's Synchronised Schedule

Print this. Fill it in each morning. Stick it on the fridge.

Schedule Item	Twin A	Twin B
Wake Time
Morning Feed
Morning Nap
Midday Feed
Midday Nap
Afternoon Feed
Afternoon Nap
Bedtime Routine
Lights Out
Night Wake 1
Night Wake 2

Notes & observations:

ONE LAST THING — IF YOU WANT THE FULL TWIN PLAYBOOK

Two babies.

One sleep system.

Chapter 14 of the full book covers the entire twin sleep playbook — including how to handle one twin sick while the other isn't, how to handle different temperaments, the Crib Hour technique for catnappers (very common in twins), and what to do when room-sharing isn't working.

Plus the full 7-night plan that worked for my own twins — and hundreds of other twin families who've used it since.

By a mom who actually has twins.

Want the full plan?

Sleep, Baby. Please. — Including a full chapter for twin parents.

GET THE BOOK → $19

www.sixandthriving.com

Sleep is coming. For all three of you.

— Six & Thriving